

MOVE IT

it's the law!

HAVE you ever been involved in a "fender bender" and left your car in a traffic lane rather than moving it? This is a pretty common habit in Virginia. If you have a non-injury accident it's not necessary to wait for the police before moving the vehicles involved. If the vehicles can be driven, move them to a safe location and then exchange the necessary information or contact the police. It's not just a good thing to do, it's Virginia law!

When you leave your car on the road, you contribute to traffic back-ups which can cause other accidents. So the next time you're involved in a non-injury accident and your vehicle can be moved—MOVE IT!

What to do after an accident:

1. Check for injuries. Make sure your passengers and those in the other vehicle(s) are okay. If anyone is injured or killed contact the police immediately. If no one is injured and you're blocking traffic, move your car out of the way first.
2. Notify police. You should notify the police if there are injuries involved, when the cars cannot be moved, when one of the drivers appears to be intoxicated, when damage exceeds $1,000, when one of the drivers has no insurance and/or when one of the drivers leaves the scene of the accident.
3. Warn oncoming traffic of the accident or hazard to prevent other accidents. Some common warning practices are raising your hood and using flares. Common ways of letting motorists know you need assistance are tying a white handkerchief to your door, waving a red flag and using a flashlight at night. Remember, if you're waiting for assistance, be patient. Crossing a roadway or attempting to stop traffic can be dangerous, especially at night.

4. Exchange Information. Give your name, address, phone number, vehicle license plate number, vehicle description, insurance information and driver's license to anyone else who was involved in the accident. Get the same information from the others involved and any names, addresses and phone numbers of any witnesses. Below is a form with the information you need to collect.
